JACKIE

DRAMA, BIOGRAPHY

Director: Pablo Larrain   Stars: Natalie Portman, Peter Sarsgaard
Languages: English, German, French, Spanish (Latin) Subtitles: Indonesian
99 min, R

The phrase ‘behind every successful man there stands a woman’ takes on a certain pertinence when discussing Jackie Kennedy (Natalie Portman), the matriarch of America’s most famous political dynasty. The former first lady of the USA, and the eponymous protagonist, in many ways evolved the seemingly outdated role into its modern interpretation. Where many recent biopics have become paint-by-numbers hagiographies, Jackie focusses solely on the aftermath of the assassination of her husband President John F Kennedy, and does not fail to highlight her transgressions as well as her admirable characteristics in a time of such tragedy.

From the opening scenes with the stark, angular and almost out-of-tune strings that return throughout the film, and a close-up of Jackie with a tear running down her face, it is at once clear that this is not your average biopic. It soon becomes clear Jackie is a meditation on grief and the notion of legacy. The narrative moves along in a staccato fashion by utilising the motif of a journalist interviewing Jackie as she appears conversely guarded and open at a time of such fragility. The film then moves back and forward through time, as we learn how the mother of two young children took to life in public office, and was then subsequently forced to deal with the loss of her prominent position along with her beloved husband.

When most people think of Jackie Kennedy, they arrive at the image of the manicured well-heeled socialite. Jackie’s self-awareness of this popular belief is made evident during an argument with her brother-in-law, Bobby Kennedy (Peter Saarsgard), where she screams, ‘I know you think I’m just some silly little debutante’. Natalie Portman provides a tour de force performance that simultaneously disproves this caricature, and fleshes out Jackie’s humanity as she embodies the essence of the former first lady.

Chilean Pablo Larrain is an interesting choice of director to take on the mantle of scrutinising a modern American icon. But it is maybe this cultural distance that allows him to have a neutrality in dissecting Jackie’s duality. And that is the key theme of the movie: the private and the personal. The film recurrently explores the weight of expectation on those who live a life in the limelight, and the problems posed by what prominent individuals are required to both share and hide from the public. Larrain equally blends together archive footage and scenes from the film with a simple elegance. An especially striking use of this technique is when real news footage of the crowds lining the streets during President Kennedy’s funeral is reflected in the window of Jackie’s car window.

Jackie deals with a key historical moment of modern American history that is etched onto the psyche of people who lived through the 1960s, but what makes it stand out from the plethora of films that deal with this tragic event is the very human touch Pablo Larrain employs. He makes it evidently clear that the world lost a president that day but, maybe more importantly a wife lost a husband and two children lost their father.

Jika kebanyakan film biografi telah terbiasa mengikuti pakem yang mengagungkan tokoh utamanya, Jackie semata-mata berfokus pada kejadian setelah penembakan suaminya, Presiden John F. Kennedy, dan berhasil mengangkat kelemahan sekaligus sikapnya yang patut dikagumi pada saat-saat tragis.

Jackie menyorot momen penting dalam sejarah modern Amerika yang amat membekas dalam kenangan mereka yang pernah hidup pada tahun 1960-an, namun yang membuatnya unik adalah kisah kehidupan seorang Presiden, namun yang lebih penting lagi adalah bahwa seorang istri telah kehilangan suaminya, dan dua anak kehilangan ayahnya pada hari itu.

Set in the not-too-distant future, 5,000 passengers lie in cryosleep aboard a giant spaceship called the Avalon. They are 30 years in to a 120-year journey, heading to a planet called Homestead II, where they intend to start an idyllic new life. But things go wrong when Jim Preston (Pratt), a down-to-earth engineer, awakens from his malfunctioned sleep pod to discover that everybody else is still asleep, and will remain that way for another 90 years. There is plenty on board to occupy him temporarily: a cinema, a dance-off machine and, crucially, an android bartender (played to perfection by Michael Sheen), whose art-deco set-up is clearly meant to evoke chilling recollections of The Shining (1980) – another great film about the effects of isolation.

After a year of solitude, Jim is losing his grip on his sanity and contemplating suicide. He puts this on hold, however, when he catches sight of the beautiful Aurora (Lawrence), a journalist from New York, peacefully sleeping in her pod. He becomes obsessed, poring over her video blogs until he has convinced himself that she is his dream woman. In an act of desperation, he condemns Aurora to his own fate, and he wakes her up. As Jim helps Aurora come to terms with her situation (pretending, of course, that her sleep pod had also malfunctioned), Jim gets what he wanted and their relationship begins to blossom.

While Jim's act is unquestionably immoral, Pratt's amiability makes it nigh on impossible to consider him a villain, and the scenes where they fall in love are as warm and fuzzy as any romantic comedy. Despite Jim's deceit, you can't help but root for them as a couple – though it is interesting to wonder how Aurora would react were she woken up by a less handsome passenger. The question, “What would you do?” looms heavy over the entire film and unusually – for a $100 million Hollywood blockbuster – we are presented with some real ideological conundrums. Life is not as simple as good guys vs bad guys, even if films often are.

LATEST RELEASE FEATURE

It’s undeniable that we are living in the golden age of gaming. The video game market is thriving – creatively, technologically and financially – with 2016’s Call of Duty: Infinite Warfare selling 1.8 million copies in its first week alone. That’s why it’s puzzling that the film industry hasn’t put more energy into mining this rich seam of source material. Of course, there have been numerous video game adaptations: notably the Resident Evil and Tomb Raider franchises, Silent Hill (2006) and Warcraft (2016), but rarely are they treated with the same reverence that would be afforded to, say, a literary adaptation. That might all be about to change, however, with Assassin’s Creed. The film’s pedigree is impressive; director Justin Kurzel, alongside actors Marion Cotillard and Michael Fassbender (who also takes a producer credit here) who last worked together on Macbeth (2016). They tackle Ubisoft’s action-adventure game with much the same vigour as they did the Bard’s tragic tale, and their charismatic performances lend their solemn characters some intriguing nuance that may have fallen by the wayside in the hands of lesser performers. Also along for the ride are notable thespians Jeremy Irons, Brendan Gleeson and Charlotte Rampling – a cast you’d assume would be more familiar with awards shortlists than games menus.

The story itself revolves around Cal Lynch (Fassbender), a murderer who is about to receive his government-administered lethal injection when he is whisked away to Abstergo Industries, a mysterious organisation run by the ominous Alan Rikkin (Irons) and his daughter Sophia (Cotillard). They have discovered that Cal is the descendant of Aguilar de Nerha, a lethal assassin from fifteenth-century Spain, so they hook him up to a Matrix-esque contraption that allows him to inhabit his former self under the guise that they are researching the hereditary nature of violence. But could it be that they have a different motive altogether? As Cal ventures deeper into Aguilar’s world, we are treated to some truly spectacular action sequences. The fight choreography is thrilling and refreshingly old-school in its prioritising of grace over gore, which should please fans of the game who love its parkour-inspired, close quarters fighting style. It is a leap forward for the genre, and with dozens of films currently rumoured to be in development – Call of Duty, Halo and fellow Ubisoft stablemate The Division being just a few examples – it’s looking like the next few years could be a boon for video game lovers.

Kisahnya sendiri berakhir seputar Cal Lynch (Michael Fassbender), seorang pembunuh yang akan menjalani hukuman suntik mati yang dilakukan oleh pemerintah, saat ia dibawa kabur ke Abstergo Industries, sebuah organisasi misterius yang dipimpin oleh Alan Rikkin (Jeremy Irons) dan putrinya Sophia (Marion Cotillard). Mereka menemukan bahwa Cal adalah keturunan dari Aguilar de Nerha, seorang pembunuh hayaran terkenal dari Spanyol pada abad ke-16, sehingga mereka menghubungkannya dengan mesin seperti dalam film Matrix yang memungkinkan dia untuk menempati kembali bentuk lamanya dengan berpura-pura sedang melakukan penelitian tentang sifat bawaan dari kekerasan. Namun mungkin mereka ternyata memiliki motif yang berbeda?

Saat Cal memasuki dunia Aguilar lebih dalam lagi, kita akan disuguhki serangkaian adegan aksi yang amat spektakuler. Koreografi perkelahianan sangat menegangkan dan menyegarkan karena bergaya klasik yang memprioritaskan keanggunan dibanding kesadisan, yang akan memuaskan para penggemar setia permainannya yang terinspirasi olahraga parkour dengan gaya perkelahian jarak dekat. Ini merupakan lompatan ke depan bagi genre ini, dan dengan lusinan film yang dikabarkan sedang dikembangkan, seperti Call of Duty, Halo, serta satu lagi dari Ubisoft The Division, yang hanya contoh sebagian kecil, sepertinya beberapa tahun ke depan akan menjadi masa yang menyenangkan bagi para pencinta permainan video.
After the death of his six-year-old daughter, New York advertising executive Howard (Will Smith) struggles to come to terms with the tragedy, and consequently becomes a virtual recluse. Two years on, his anxious former colleagues Whit (Ed Norton), Simon (John Pena) and Claire (Kate Winslet) plot to save the advertising company Howard worked so hard to build up. Howard’s extended absence means one of their largest clients is threatening to pull out, but luckily for them a large financial institution is willing to buy the company out. The only problem is that Howard needs to sign it off and he appears to have no interest in complying with the board’s wishes.

His colleagues decide to have him trailed by a private detective in the hope they can prove he is no longer fit to make business decisions, but instead all they uncover is that Howard has been addressing letters to Love, Time and Death. The mantra he once used to explain the importance of advertising has taken on a new meaning for Howard.

Through a beneficial coincidence, Whit comes into contact with actress Amy (Keira Knightley) during a casting at the agency. He follows her to an old theatre where he ends up meeting Amy playing out a scene with Brigitte (Helen Mirren) and Raffi (Jacob Latimore). Later, when looking after his mother with dementia, Whit arrives at the realisation that by employing the actors to become the addressees of Howard’s letters they could possibly prove Howard’s emotional instability and unsuitability for legal decision-making. It is at this point the film takes a turn into magic realism, in which it remains for the duration, leaving the audience to question the reality of events.

Smith admirably portrays a father drowning in a world that no longer makes sense, and among the stellar supporting cast Norton gives a hard-nosed character to his realistic advertising executive. Director David Frankel helpfully guides viewers through a tearjerking plot with a number of twists that is bound to tug at the heartstrings of fans of weepies.

Will Smith with gemilang menggambarkan seorang ayah yang tenggelam dalam dunia yang tak lagi masuk akal, dan di antara para pemeran pembantu yang cemerlang itu, Edward Norton memberikan sifat keras pendirian pada tokoh eksektif periklanan yang diperankan. Sutradara David Frankel berhasil memandu para penonton melalui alur menguras air mata dengan beberapa kejutan yang dijamin akan menyentuh perasaan para penggemar film melankolis.

A Love Letter to Kartini is an Indonesian drama based on real events. The film begins with Sarwadi (Chicco Jerikho), a widower who started working as a postman in Jepara during the Dutch colonial era in 1901. He delivers a letter to the residence of the Regent of Jepara, and ends up meeting the Regent’s oldest daughter, Kartini (Rania Putrisari). Struck by her beauty, and later amazed by her bold ideas for providing education for indigenous women, Sarwadi falls in love with Kartini almost immediately, and he even sends his only daughter, Ningrum (Christabelle Grace Marbun), to her to become her first student.

Kartini’s ideals and acts are not understood and appreciated by most people. According to tradition, a woman’s role is to find a husband, get married and start a family. Kartini wants to establish a school to educate women so that they can then go on to educate their children (and even grandchildren), so that knowledge can be passed down generation after generation. But Kartini’s beliefs very much break with the current customs. Most people think of her as a ‘strange’ woman – some even try to convince Sarwardi of this fact. However, Sarwadi’s love for Kartini proves to be unyielding. Unfortunately, he then learns that Kartini is to marry a Regent of Rembang, and become his fourth wife.

Kartini’s arranged marriage effectively shows how the struggles between conventional wisdom and unconventional ideas are never easy. Kartini’s views on women’s emancipation are commonplace now, but were practically unheard of at that time, to the extent that she had to pay a heavy price for being outspoken. This film reminds us not to take everything we have for granted.

Director: Azhar Kinoi Lubis   Stars: Chicco Jerikho, Rania Putri Sari
Languages: Indonesian   Subtitles: English

Surat Cinta untuk Kartini merupakan drama Indonesia yang berdasarkan kisah nyata. Film dimulai dengan adegan Sarwadi (Chicco Jerikho), seorang duda yang mulai bekerja sebagai tukang pos di Jepara pada masa penjajahan Belanda, tahun 1901. Ia mengantar surat untuk penghuni rumah Bupati Jepara, dan bertemu dengan putri sulung Bupati, yang bernama Kartini (Rania Putrisari). Karena terpesona akan kecantikannya, dan nantinya kagum akan ide-idenya yang berani untuk menyediakan pendidikan bagi wanita pribumi, Sarwadi seketika jatuh cinta pada Kartini, dan ia bahkan mengirimkan putri pertamanya Ningrum (Christabelle Grace Marbun), kepada Kartini agar menjadi murid pertamanya.

Performa bintang utama Chicco Jerikho sangatlah baik, dan ia mampu menghidupkan tokoh Sarwadi dengan memberi perhatian yang mengagumkan pada aksen dan gerak tubuh. Sementara Rania, sebagai Kartini, tampil anggun, memukau, misterius, dan terutama memberontak. Yang juga membantu adalah para pemeran pembantu, seperti Ence Bagus dan Ayu Diah Pasha (sebagai ibu dari Kartini), yang sangat berwibawa dan mampu mengisi film ini secara keseluruhan.

Pernikahan paksa yang dijalani Kartini menunjukkan bahwa pertentangan antara tradisi konvensional dan ide-ide non-konvensional tidak akan pernah berjalan mudah. Pandangan Kartini tentang emansipasi wanita kini merupakan hal biasa, namun hampir tak terdengar pada masa itu, hingga ia harus membayar harga yang mahal untuk keberaniannya berbicara. Film ini mengingatkan kita untuk mensyukuri apa yang kita miliki.

Eyes of Art – Heri Dono is a documentary that delves into Heri Dono, one of Indonesia’s best-known contemporary artists. He was born in Jakarta in June 1960, and studied at the Indonesian Art Institute in Yogyakarta, where he won the prize for Best Painting in 1981 and 1985.

Heavily influenced by Javanese “wayang” theatre, comic books and animation, Dono's works are characterised by his penchant for the fantastical and the absurd, populated by astonishing characters and strange juxtapositions. While ostensibly playful and humorous, his works often contain incisive sociopolitical commentary on both Indonesia and abroad. He works across a broad range of media, including painting, sculpture, installation and performance.

Although Dono has earned himself both fame and success, he lives a simple and humble life and has even named his studio in Jakarta “Failure”; to him, art is a form of passion, sensation, expression and play, and it is okay to not always succeed. His work mixes humoristic comments on political and social issues in Indonesia. And he is featured in numerous exhibitions around the globe – the most recent ones being the 2011 London and the 2015 Venice biennales.

Dono believes that art can be found not only in traditional culture but also in everyday modern life, and so his style is viewed as the art form of new internationalism. Maybe through the eyes of Dono we will see and experience a new world of contemporary art.

Learn more about him on Eyes of Art, playing on board today.
When you think of a setting for a successful sitcom, what comes to mind? The parks and recreation department of a local government office might not initially seem like a bountiful subject for comedy. However, the bureaucracy of small town American politics provides the perfect home for a group of memorable characters who aspire to bigger stages, often with hilarious consequences.

The ambitious Lesley Knope (Amy Poehler) may be a mid-level bureaucrat, but she takes her role in office seriously, far too seriously, and wants to leave her mark on the town of Pawnee, and the world for that matter. On her, ‘Wall of Inspirational Women’, figures include Hillary Clinton, Condoleezza Rice and Madeleine Albright; one imagines there is a place waiting for a picture of herself. She is joined by her boss, the inimitable Ron Swanson (Nick Offerman), a man with a much coveted moustache, and a general disdain for politics that you might think would disqualify him from his chosen career. They are supported by Tom Haverford (Aziz Ansari), a quick-witted, budding trendsetter whose primary dream in life is to own a nightclub. Another familiar face comes in the form of gentle giant and village idiot Andy (Chris Pratt), who has gone on to forge a career in Hollywood. Meanwhile, health freak and overall boss Chris Traeger (Rob Lowe) provides further star power.

From park creation to funding cuts and budget crises, and from red tape to rivalries with other towns, the parks and recreation department deals with a seemingly endless stream of dilemmas. This fast-paced show is packed full of hysterical one-liners, ridiculous visual stunts and an inventive witty script. However, what makes it work is the immaculately crafted characters who you learn to empathise with and invest in as the series progresses.

Poehler’s portrayal of insatiable ambition and civic pride in dual measure has helped forge a new comedic icon in the form of Lesley Knope. Added to this, Offerman’s brilliant display of passive-aggressive disinterest combines brilliantly with her manic performance.

JUST KIDDING – SEASON 1

EPISODES 13, 14, 15 & 16

30 min
Hidden-camera reality show in which pranks are played on the general public. Acara realitas dengan kamera tersembunyi yang menampilkkan lelucon yang ditujukan pada masyarakat umum.
Since storming onto the pop scene in 1982, all wild hair, punk attitude and black fishnets, Madonna has never been one to rest on her laurels. Like David Bowie before her, and (arguably) Lady Gaga since with every new album Madonna releases, she also unveils a new identity that becomes indelibly bound with the music. From controversial religious imagery to country-rodeo Americana, there are many iconic versions of the Queen of Pop. She is an artist of immense imagination, always pushing forward, and never taking her legacy for granted. Which brings us to Celebration (2009), Madonna’s third greatest hits album, featuring two discs full to bursting with incredible hits. Interestingly, the tracks aren’t put out in chronological order – a fact that only highlights how varied her output has been stylistically, as well as how high the standard has remained. The opening trio of “Hung Up”, “Music” and “Vogue” is sure to get you dancing; they are three tracks of unadulterated, disco-floor-filling joy. From there on, the hits just keep on coming. There’s “Like a Virgin”, “Into the Groove”, “Like a Prayer, “Ray of Light”, “Papa Don’t Preach”, and “Lucky Star”, to name just a few. To the delight of fans everywhere, the album also features two new tracks: “Revolver” (featuring New Orleans rapper Lil Wayne), and “Celebration”. Both tracks are fizzy and fun, and show Madonna’s unwavering enthusiasm for staying on top of current trends. “4 Minutes” is another testament to this; the lead single from her 2008 album Hard Candy stands up as strong as anything from the earlier half of her career. Featuring vocals from Justin Timberlake and Timbaland, it’s three minutes (presumably they used the extra minute to save the world, as the lyrics suggest) of electronic pop bliss. It’s also her best-selling digital single to date. How many artists can you say are still creating such big hits at this stage in their career? Since Celebration was released, she’s put out two more albums of new material and shows no sign of slowing down. We get the feeling there’ll be a lot more to celebrate yet. Sejak mengorbit di dunia musik pop pada tahun 1982, dengan rambut rambut liar, sikap memberontak, dan kostum berjaring hitam, Madonna bukanlah tipe artis yang dengan mudah menghilang dari peredaran. Seperti layaknya David Bowie pendahulunya, serta (mungkin) penerusnya Lady Gaga, dengan tiap album yang dirilisnya, Madonna mengungkap identitas baru yang secara tak terlupakan terkait erat dengan musiknya. Mulai dari penggambaran religius hingga gaya rodeo ala kampung koboi Amerika, terdapat banyak versi ikonik dari Sang Ratu Pop. Ia adalah artis dengan imajinasi berlimpah-ruah, selalu mendobrak maju, dan sangat berdedikasi pada karya-karyanya. Ini mengantarkan kita pada Celebration (2009), album kumpulan lagu hit yang ketiga dari Madonna. Menampilkan dua piringan yang penuh dengan lagu-lagu populernya yang luar biasa. Yang menarik, treknya tidak disusun secara kronologis, fakta yang justru menegaskan betapa bervariasianya gaya hasil-hasil karyanya, begitu pula bagaimana standar tingginya tetap terjaga. Trio pembuka yaitu “Hung Up”, “Music”, dan “Vogue” pasti akan membuat Anda bergoyang karena merupakan tiga trek yang penuh dengan keriangan murni di lantai disko. Dari sini, hit-hitnya terus berlanjut. Lagu-lagu seperti “Like a Virgin”, “Into the Groove”, “Like a Prayer, “Ray of Light”, “Papa Don’t Preach”, dan “Lucky Star” hanya beberapa contohnya. Yang menggembirakan para penggemarnya adalah adanya dua trek baru, yaitu “Revolver” (menampilkan rapper asal New Orleans Lil Wayne), dan “Celebration”. Kedua trek tersebut penuh semangat dan enak didengar, serta menunjukkan semangat Madonna untuk tetap menjadi nomor satu dalam hal tren masa kini. “4 Minutes” merupakan bukti lain dari hal ini. Lagu utama dari albumnya pada tahun 2008 Hard Candy ditampilkan semantap lagu-lagunya pada masa awal karier. Dengan menampilkan vokal Justin Timberlake dan Timbaland, ini merupakan 3 menit (mungkin mereka menggunakan waktu ekstra untuk menyelamatkan dunia, seperti terungkap di lirik) musik pop elektronik yang penuh pesona. Itu juga merupakan lagu digitalnya yang paling laris hingga kini. Ada berapa artis yang masih mampu menciptakan hit-hit besar pada tahapan ini dalam karier mereka? Sejak diluncurkannya Celebration, ia mengeluarkan dua album lagi dengan materi baru dan tidak menunjukkan tanda-tanda akan berhenti. Sepertinya akan ada lebih banyak hal lagi yang dapat dirayakan.
